

E.T. Disclosure Agenda Exposed--9-5-16

Dr. Johnson's Main Website at: <http://contendingfortruth.com/>

Alternate Site: <http://contendingforfaith.com/>

Email: drjohnson@ix.netcom.com

Free Gift: Salvation & the TRUE Gospel/Good News!

Table of Contents:

- ++ The Independence Day Resurgence Movie -- Aliens -- U.S. Army Recruiting For Earth Space Defense!
- Obama Report to Congress Supports Whistleblower Claims of Secret Space War
- General Mark Milley, U.S. Army Chief of Staff Talks About "Hybrid Armies" and "Little Green Men" the Military Will Face
- European Commission President Says he Spoke to Leaders of Other Planets about Brexit
- Some Not Happy NASA Gave $1.1 Million To Theology Institute To Study How "ET Discovery" Will Shakeup World's Religions
- DISCLOSURE: ALIEN DISCLOSURE ADVOCATE LEAKS NORAD DOCUMENTS ON UFOS
- Forked Tongue Liar Speaks About Disclosure: "The Most Profound Event In Human History Stephan Bassett...This legacy is massive. More profound than the coming of Christ!" - Stephen Bassett
- ++ Listener Comment: Black Eyed Women Spotted
- Listener Comment: Black Eyed Person Encounter
- Strange Documented Disappearances of Hunters
- Listener Comment: Satans Children
- ++ L.A. Marzulli's Shocking Find! Photos, X-Rays Included! What Is That? Could This Bizarre Winged Creature Be A Fairy, An Alien Or A Locust From The Book Of Revelation?
- Real HUMAN FAIRY HYBRID: "Fairy" with "Human Skeleton" X-ray Analysis, Mexico Fairy
- ++ Giant of Kandahar Afghanistan
- Unreal! Two GIANT Men spotted nearby Giza Pyramids!
- The Extensively Documented Conquistadors Encounters with Giants

Ephesians 5:11, 13-16: "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. But all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, Redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

The 1828 Noah Webster Dictionary defines:

Reprove: To blame, to convince of a fault, or to make it manifest, to excite a sense of guilt.

Circumspectly: Cautiously; with watchfulness every way; with attention to guard against surprise or danger.

Matthew 24:24: "...if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."

II Corinthians 2:11: "Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices."

II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

++ The Independence Day Resurgence Movie -- Aliens -- U.S. Army Recruiting For Earth Space Defense!

Sunday, May 15, 2016

Alien Invasion Imminent? U.S. Army Recruiting For Earth Space Defense!!!

This is not a joke! The U.S. Army is in fact using the release of the upcoming sequel to a blockbuster hit: Independence Day: Resurgence, in theaters June 24, 2016, with the slogan "United We Survive | Join the ESD," for recruiting! This is a REAL U.S. Army website. The ad reads:

Defend Tomorrow Enlist Today

Since the war of 1996, the Earth Space Defense has been preparing for the next great alien invasion. We're looking for the best and brightest from around the globe to join the ESD, and protect mankind. Our purpose is simple: defend earth's independence at all costs. Learn more about U.S. Army careers

www.goarmy.com/joinesd.html

This is an actual TV commercial for the GoArmy website:

Play: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kulRAEZw-Mc>

What on Earth are they trying to tell us?

Another commercial features a man talking about how proud he is of his daughter who, like him, has enlisted to fly jet planes against the alien horde back in the war of 1996.

Play: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IYc2fJZ9zog>

"Be someone's hero," the text of the commercial says in big letters. "Paid for by the U.S. Army," it says in much smaller letters.

Ronald Reagan did speak of the advantages of an 'outside alien threat' several times throughout the '80s as a way to unite humanity under a common purpose. To save mankind.

<http://beforeitsnews.com/alternative/2016/05/alien-invasion-imminent-u-s-army-recruiting-for-earth-space-defense-this-is-not-a-joke-3353079.html>

Obama Report to Congress Supports Whistleblower Claims of Secret Space War

Jun 25, 2016-- On May 26, President Barack Obama issued a report to the U.S. Congress about an interagency effort to develop an “integrated policy” to deter potential enemies in Space. Obama’s “Space Report” gives credence to secret space program whistleblowers such as Corey Goode, who claim that battles have been fought between rival secret space programs in 2015, with the most recent occurring over Antarctica in April 2016.

In a letter released through the White House Press Secretary discussing the report along with a classified Annex, Obama said:

“The report is the result of an interagency process with the objectives to reduce risks to the United States and our allies in space; and to protect and preserve the rights, access, capabilities, use, and freedom of action of the United States in space. Success will require a multi-year effort and commitment across all departments and agencies, and I look forward to your continued support.”

Obama’s letter said the report was issued to comply with “section 1613 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2016”, which he signed into law on November 25, 2015.

The Act was first submitted as a Bill on May 14, 2015, and had the following section to which Obama was directly responding in his May 26, 2016, letter:

“Requires the President to establish an interagency process to develop a policy to deter adversaries in space.”

Obama’s letter refers to “a multi-year effort and commitment across all departments and agencies.” What provides important context for his letter are reports of alleged battles in space between different secret space programs, which began in early 2015 according to Goode.

Goode’s first public reference to battles in space was in an email interview released on May 30, 2015 where he discussed recent military conflict between different secret space programs [SSP] and their respective extraterrestrial allies both on Earth and in deep space:

It is very significant that Goode’s May 30, 2015 revelations of recent space battles overlapped with the introduction into the U.S. Congress of the original bill for the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2016, which requested Obama to: “establish an interagency process to develop a policy to deter adversaries in space.”

General Mark Milley, U.S. Army Chief of Staff

Norwich University hosted General Mark A. Milley, 39th U.S. Army Chief of Staff, on April 21, 2016 at 7:00 p.m. in Kreitzberg Arena. GEN Milley presented “Leading Through Complexity,” the keynote address of the ROTC Centennial Symposium.

Play from 33:10 to 35:05: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gUt-W95E9Zg>

European Commission President Says he Spoke to Leaders of Other Planets about Brexit

Dr Michael Salla on July 2, 2016.

In a speech before the European Parliament discussing the consequences of the Brexit vote, the President of the European Commission, Jean-Claude Juncker, made the stunning comment that he had spoken about it to “leaders of other planets.” Juncker’s comment suggest that world leaders are in communication with extraterrestrials, which closely monitor global events and assess their geopolitical and ‘exopolitical’ impact.

Juncker’s speech was given on June 28 at an emergency meeting in Brussels by the European Parliament. Here is what he said in French along with the English translation: “Il faut savoir que ceux qui nous observent de loin sont très inquiets. J’ai vu et entendu et écouté plusieurs des dirigeants d’autres planètes qui sont très inquiets puisqu’ils s’interrogent sur la voie que l’union européenne va poursuivre. Et donc, il faut rassurer, et les européens, et ceux qui nous observent de plus... loin.”

“It should be known that those who observe us from afar are very worried. I met and heard and listened to several of the leaders from other planets who are very concerned because they question the path the European Union will engage on. And so, a soothing is needed for both the Europeans and those who observe us from ... farther away.”

The official transcript released by the European Commission has been edited to remove the reference to “leaders from other planets”. The transcript now reads: J’ai vu et entendu et écouté plusieurs des dirigeants. Ils sont très inquiets

“I saw and heard and listened to several executives. They are very worried ...”

Yet, when one listens to an audio loop of what Juncker’s actually said, he very clearly includes the phrase “dirigeants d’autres planètes,” which translates as “leaders of other planets,” as pointed out by native French speakers discussing Junckers speech, and also by Google Translate.

Taken on face value, Juncker’s speech directly raises the issue that “leaders of other planets,” or extraterrestrials, are very concerned by the Brexit issue and its implications for the European Union. It’s worth exploring why this might be the case.

One is that extraterrestrials require global unity as a precondition for revealing themselves to humanity, or having their existence disclosed. If so, then the effect of Brexit is one of slowing down the process of global political unification, thereby delaying any official announcement of extraterrestrial life.

While it appears logical that global political unity is required for any planet to be introduced to wider galactic life, as popularly depicted in many Sci Fi shows, it does not follow that having a world government is necessary for open contact to happen. Here we need to distinguish between 'global government' and 'global governance'. Our planet may already have achieved sufficient 'global governance' in terms of interlocking international treaties and institutions, thereby making 'global government' a moot point. There are other scenarios that may help explain why "leaders of other worlds" are concerned about Brexit, and why Junckers chose the European Parliament as the forum to "leak" this information. Most EU Parliamentarians are not part of the official loop on what would clearly be highly classified discussions with advanced alien civilizations, yet Junckers chose to reveal this to them. Why?

Many will be tempted to dismiss Junckers' admission of having spoken with extraterrestrials as him simply misspeaking about confidential discussions with other world leaders. However, the clumsy attempt by the European Commission to remove the "leaders of other worlds" reference from the official transcript of his speech, no effort to clarify his real intent in the transcript, and overall context of his speech suggest otherwise.

Junckers speech needs to be taken at face value, and therefore provides startling evidence that we are moving from a world of 'geopolitics' to 'exopolitics' requiring new levels of analysis in understanding major political events on our planet such as Brexit, and the existence of extraterrestrial life.

<http://exopolitics.org/european-commission-president-says-he-spoke-to-leaders-of-other-planets-about-brexit/>

Some Not Happy NASA Gave $1.1 Million To Theology Institute To Study How "ET Discovery" Will Shakeup World's Religions

In 2014, NASA gave $1.1 million to the Center of Theological Inquiry, an independent institution "rooted in Christian theology."

The grant supports an initiative to study "the societal implications of astrobiology." Surprisingly, it took more than a year for anyone to complain. The potential issue here is obvious: NASA is a government agency. The Center of Theological Inquiry is a center of theological inquiry—an institution that seemingly has a religious, and specifically Christian, orientation.

DISCLOSURE: ALIEN DISCLOSURE ADVOCATE LEAKS NORAD DOCUMENTS ON UFOS

Aaron Kesel | Jul 25, 2016--Something seemingly went unnoticed by mainstream press and alternative media.

During the Alien Cosmic Expo 2016, Victor Viggiani, a well known Disclosure advocate leaked 11 TOP SECRET North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) documents he calls the "Renock files," proving that the UFO/ET topic is a matter of National Security.

Play: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HM7bZx5av3A>

The documents Victor Viggiani leaked can be found on Mufons official website uploaded to scribd.com.

Disclosure is no longer seen as fringe, or crazy to believe we are not alone or the government is covering up extraterrestrial life. Maybe that's because every other month now there is a massive sighting in our skies or in space itself and NASA has cut it's ISS feed one too many times.

Now we know definitively that the U.S. wants to down play UFOs, something that could have been guessed since NSA whistle-blower Edward Snowden released slides on UFOs that suggested a Cointelpro disinformation operation.

The NSA has also acknowledged UFO's in another document called "Key To The Extraterrestrial Messages", as has the FBI who began declassifying some very pointed documents. One of these documents is blunt in saying extraterrestrials exist and are extra-dimensional in nature and inter-penetrating Earth.

<http://wearechange.org/disclosure-alien-disclosure-advocate-leaks-top-secret-norad-documents-ufos/>

Forked Tongue Liar Speaks About Disclosure: "The Most Profound Event In Human History Stephan Bassett... This legacy is massive. More profound than the coming of Christ!" - Stephen Bassett

Play: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cCFf12ILDcS>

++ From: James

Sent: Thursday, May 12, 2016 8:13 PM

Subject: Listener Comment: Black Eyed Women Spotted

I got an email from a brother in Christ in the Ukraine. He saw a black eyed woman. From what he has told me he had several encounters with blacked eyed people lately.

From: James

Sent: Saturday, May 14, 2016 2:42 PM

Subject: Listener Comment: Black Eyed Person Encounter

I emailed the person today that this story is about and got permission to share this with you. I am keeping names of people and places confidential. I used to go to this gym where I lived where I met him. So back in 2004 or 2005 while I was working out in the gym I met this guy and we would talk in between sets like most people do. So over time the Lord used me as a vessel to bring him to Jesus. He got saved and is hungry for Jesus still to this day.

Well before he became a Christian he was dating this girl. He had been dating her for a long time. One day while on vacation at the beach her eyes turned completely black with no white in them at all. I asked him what he was thinking and how did he feel about this when it all happened. He responded with this from a previous email that I am posting on here below:

I was like is this really happening. But I reacted fast. She was on top of me while I had my legs on the floor and my back on the bed. I said hey I don't feel comfortable with you being drunk and I was getting up. I also said your eyes turned black too. She all of a sudden fell sick and had to go to the bathroom. I stayed outside the door. She was in there for a while and I started to hear a voice in another room. But couldn't make it out. I entered the room thinking it had to be a spirit and wanted to know what it was saying, but it stopped. Then I went back to the bathroom to get her out of there, because I don't like being in houses where spirits are talking lol. I found that the door was now locked and I yelled to her and she didn't responded. I didn't know what to do because I didn't want to break my uncle's door down unless I knew it was an emergency. After about 30 seconds she finally said something. I asked her why did she lock the door? She said didn't remember anything. For me I couldn't explain any of it and just didn't think on it too much because I didn't have enough knowledge or life experience to figure it out and I really thought no one did, at the time.

So he dated her still after he got saved. He joined a church and had her go with him. She never joined of course. So being a Christian he wanted to marry her. Like he said in the above comments he did not understand why her eyes turned black. So he went to premarital counseling at the church. After one day they stopped. God protected him from this hybrid and a wedge was driven between them. She still tries to contact him still to this day.

So let me wrap this up. A human was dating a hybrid nephilim then he gets saved. He joins a church and him and the hybrid go to counseling with the pastor and his wife in a 501c3 church. The counseling only lasts one day then it ends. The Lord drove a wedge between him and the hybrid. Isn't that insane. I remember him telling me about her eyes after he got saved but he didn't know anything about black eyed beings at the time; nor did I. This sure does sound like Genesis 6 to me!!!!

What is crazy about all this was at the time I was studying a lot about the Nephilim and Genesis 6. I was getting a lot of resistance about the Nephilim in the church at this time. Everyone was saying oh it's the sons of Seth. Like I said before during this time I knew nothing about black eyed people. I never even heard about them. The crazy thing is this Scott, when I was studying about Nephilim I met and talked to this guys hybrid girlfriend. I had talked with her on several occasions. I will say I didn't look at her eyes or anything. I didn't make it a habit to look at people's eyes then like i do now. The Lord never allowed me to see her shift. If she did I never noticed. Like I told you before, the first time I saw a black eyed person was in the Bahamas in 2010.

Coast To Coast AM - July 31, 2016

Strange Documented Disappearances of Hunters

David Paulides joined George Knapp in the first three hours to discuss his new book about people that have disappeared in the national forests and elsewhere. "Missing 411- Hunters" chronicles hunters who have vanished under very unusual but extremely similar conditions from four countries. In contrast to many of those who've gone missing in national parks, such as children, and people hiking alone; deer hunters and bear hunters are attuned to being in the woods. They know exactly where they're going to go out and hunt, they know the terrain...the dangers. They carry weapons with them," he noted, so it's all the more startling when they vanish in inexplicable ways.

There are 59 geographical clusters of missing people in North America, with the largest being in Yosemite Park, he reported. The largest number of disappearances of hunters have taken place in the states of Idaho, Montana, Washington, Maine, Oregon, and Colorado, he cited.

Paulides also has documented cases of bow hunters' mysterious disappearances, in which they are either not found or found under very bizarre conditions. An experienced hunter, Aaron Hedges, was hunting with friends in the 'Crazy Mountains' in Montana in 2014, and get separated from the group, but was in contact with them via radio, before he went missing. A week after his disappearance, they found his boots and camelback in the snow, but ground searchers and dogs yielded no further evidence in the area. Nine months later, his backpack and vest were found, 15 miles away from the other location, yet it would seem impossible that he could have traveled that distance in the snow without shoes, Paulides noted.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EdcBff43Tb4>

Comment from a listener about this audio:

On Tue, Aug 9, 2016 at 8:35 AM, Patricia wrote: Yes, two people called into the program, the calls came in at the end of the interview. What prompted these two people to call in (with predator camouflage stories) was that one of the hunters (in Dave Paulides new book) was being stalked by something that was in the trees, invisible except for the distortion caused by the camouflage cloak. I am inclined to think that predator was a cloaked bigfoot or something else that was not human. He could jump from tree to tree. (One of the men who called in was so disturbed telling his own story about beings having seen predator camouflage, he could barely get the story out. That man (that was so disturbed) thought the cloaked beings he saw were humans, maybe, as they were entering a military compound when he saw them. (I am inclined to think his assessment was correct as he did not say anything about unusual height or size.) Also a woman who called in took a picture with her cell phone of the cloaked entity.

From: Kamil

Sent: Wednesday, July 13, 2016 1:55 AM

Subject: Listener Comment: Satans Children

I just wanted to share some things the Lord has been showing me lately and how important it could be to pray about this. The certain timing of all the information dumping lately cannot just be coincidental. I don't usually recommend watching any TV shows but if you have the time please watch GOTHAM (Season 2 Episode 21), its about 40 minutes but the content revealed is just mind blowing if you consider that this is exactly what has been going on in underground labs but probably on a much more wicked and sinister level. It is basically about genetic manipulation and the devil making his own children.

This idea of Satan trying to make "better" beings is just so sickening because a corrupt tree can only bare corrupt fruit and the devils that posses these scientists giving them a 'Godlike' complex can only end in devastation. All they are doing is creating monsters and abominations! How convenient that Hellywood is pushing all these superhero shows more and more; and a lot of these curses are presented as gifts to humanity.

If one considers that portals are being opened, demons are entering our dimension and seek bodies to inhabit it would make sense why they bringing back so many dead people to "life" as vessels for these demons because it's quite obvious when these bodies are clinically resurrected it's not the person they were before the death. Fallen angels, necromancy, technological enhancements, portals, scientists splicing and playing gods... what is to come upon this earth?

At the same time I was directed to purchase a book called Xenogenesis - Turning men into monsters by Stephen Quayle and having some really weird dreams regarding how "they" would start replacing us through this advanced technology, meaning that the real you would disappear, but the different you would still be in the world only now playing out their agenda or serving as an implant. The dreams came before I watched this episode and purchased Xenogenesis, so if that's not Gods way of confirming these possibilities I don't know what is. I will pray and fast and see where the Lord leads :)

If you have any information or could give me some guidance regarding this I would really appreciate your input. I think it could be very important to warn people about this. Scott, in your honest opinion as a watchman do you believe that we might have entered into the 7 year tribulation period this year?

Response: From: Scott Johnson [mailto:drjohnson@ix.netcom.com]

Sent: Wednesday, July 13, 2016 10:45 AM

Subject: RE: Satans Children

Kamil: To answer your question I would say definitely we have not entered the tribulation as there are many Biblical parameters that have to be fulfilled before that can happen. See my teaching: The Gog and Magog War, The 1000 Year Millennial Reign of Jesus Christ, The Abomination of Desolation, The Rebuilt Temple, The Image of the Beast, The 7 Year Tribulation Bible Study

Yes thank you I will definitely watch that episode & yes they are definitely telegraphing their punches about what they are doing and planning. Sounds like you are pretty up on this subject. Not sure what I could add to your knowledge base but you may want to listen to my teachings on Transhumanism here:

<http://www.contendingfortruth.com/?s=transhumanism> Satan is all about corrupting our DNA and bringing forth abominations that will war with the remnant. These creatures walk among us and I have been getting more and more reports from my listeners about these things and there encounters with them. I have gotten more into this in my recent teachings on alien disclosure: <http://www.contendingfortruth.com/?s=Disclosure+>

++ L.A. Marzulli's Shocking Find! Photos, X-Rays Included! What Is That? Could This Bizarre Winged Creature Be A Fairy, An Alien Or A Locust From The Book Of Revelation?

Posted: 20 Jul 2016 06:23 PM PDT

I wasn't going to write about this. I was trained as an attorney and I am skeptical by nature, and so I generally don't like to write about things that I can't prove. But in the case of this bizarre winged creature, a couple of factors changed my mind. First of all, we actually have physical evidence which has been scientifically tested.

When it comes to things like this, people are always crying out for some real physical evidence, and now we have some. Of course the existence of evidence does not mean that we can necessarily find answers to all of our questions, but at least we have something to work with. Secondly, a highly respected researcher named L.A. Marzulli has spent a great deal of time extensively investigating this case. I have personally interacted with L.A. Marzulli, and I have followed his work for years, and so I know how credible he is.

Earlier today, I visited L.A. Marzulli's blog, and I was astounded by what I saw. There in living color was a bizarre winged creature that doesn't bear any resemblance to any animal that science currently knows about. You can view it for yourself on his blog right here.

The Winged Creature! UPDATE!!!!

JULY 20, 2016 / LAMARZULLI

Commentary & Analysis

L.A. Marzulli did not personally discover this creature. Rather, it was originally discovered on the side of a highway by a 13-year-old Mexican boy who didn't know what it was. He ultimately turned it over to a well known Mexican investigative journalist named Jaime Maussan. Since that time this creature has been x-rayed, and the x-rays enabled researchers to see that the creature possessed a full skeletal structure. The x-rays even showed that the creature's left leg had been broken at one point. This amazing discovery is featured in L.A.'s new documentary entitled "Watchers 10", and a 9 minute clip featuring analysis of this creature has been posted to YouTube right here... Play: <https://youtu.be/gayclWifYh4>

So the big question that we need to ask is this...

What in the world is that thing?

At this point, there appear to be three main theories.

Many people are calling this winged creature a fairy. But this creature looks quite gruesome and evil. It has pointy ears like a gargoyle, and the body of the creature looks to me like it resembles an insect more than a person.

Secondly, some people are calling this winged creature an "alien". But of course that label is almost instantly applied to any strange creature that pops up these days. The most common form of "alien" that people encounter are known as "the greys", but there is only a slight resemblance between this creature and "the greys".

From what people have reported, “greys” don’t have long pointy ears, they don’t have wings, and they don’t have tails.

Of course it is always possible that this creature could be another type of “alien” or demonic entity. But I don’t know we could conclusively prove that.

Thirdly, L.A. Marzulli and others have pointed out that this winged creature that was discovered in Mexico does seem to have some similarities to the “locusts” that are described in Revelation chapter 9. The following is what Revelation 9:7-11 says:

TOOLS Rev 9:7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

TOOLS Rev 9:8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

TOOLS Rev 9:9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

TOOLS Rev 9:10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

Does this creature have a face like a man? I think that you could say that.

I don’t see any hair, but it is always possible that it could have had hair at one time. I do see some frightening looking teeth, and it definitely has very prominent wings.

The detail that is most intriguing though is the stinger at the end of the tail. On Marzulli’s website, you can see a closeup of the tail and the stinger. (see above)

Obviously the stinger has a function, and at this point we can only speculate because we don’t know enough about the creature.

Ultimately, there is always the possibility that this could be some sort of an elaborate hoax, but the scientific examinations that have been done so far have cast doubt on that explanation.

I would encourage you to look into this for yourself and come to your own conclusions.

If we are indeed living in the last days as described in the Bible, then our world is going to get very, very weird in the years ahead. The Book of Revelation describes all sorts of bizarre creatures and strange events, and the more I read it the more I am convinced that the period just before Jesus comes back is going to look a whole lot more like an extremely wild science fiction movie than most people would dare to imagine.

By the time it is all said and done, we could very well see things in the years ahead that will completely blow all of our minds.

A lot that can be played here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=z0P24uGG2Z0>

Purchase Watchers Videos: <http://lamarzulli.net/freedom-nation-news-special.php>

He said you can rent it on Vimeo for around $9.00

L.A. Marzulli’s Youtube: <https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCySeXTLuH6wSJveZrA-sz9A>

L.A. Website: <http://ppsreport.com/>

Play to 3:12: Real HUMAN FAIRY HYBRID: "Fairy" with "Human Skeleton" X-ray Analysis, Mexico Fairy

From: mdcombs

Sent: Monday, May 16, 2016 12:36 AM

Subject: ++ Listener Comment: The Giant of Kandahar Afghanistan

LA Marzulli has released his trailer on the 10th watchers series. It shows him interviewing a US soldier who witnessed a giant coming out to kill their team. You can watch it here: Giant of Kandahar Afghanistan - Episode 18

It's amazing how your teaching came right at the same time that Spielbergs film BFG (Big Friendly Giant) is making headlines with its Cannes premiere. I skimmed through an old 70s/80s animated version of BFG and it showed how this "good" giant, who kidnaps this little girl (same as in the Spielberg trailer), helps the military fight against all the bad Giants towards the end. The giant also has magical powers as well. Nothing like preparing the masses for this fearful reality/deception.

Comment:

Gen 6:4&5 There were giants (nephilim) in the earth in those days (Noah's/Noe's days); and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown. And GOD saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.

Mat 24:37: But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

From: exodus

Sent: Thursday, June 16, 2016 11:26 AM

Subject: Giants on Google Earth?

Hey Dr. Scott,

Have you seen this video yet? This guys says he found giants on a street near the Giza pyramids on google earth. Play: Unreal! | Two GIANT Men spotted nearby Giza Pyramids!

View the picture here:

http://www.panoramio.com/photo_explorer#view=photo&position=1818&with_photo_id=26056937&order=date_desc&user=573955

The Conquistadors encounters with Giants

After a failed invasion of Northern Florida the Spanish conqueror and explorer Pánfilo de Narváez retreated back to port with a ragged bunch of restless men. More than half of his platoon had either been killed by the savage Florida jungles or were picked off by killer native attacks. Supplies had vanished, and when Narváez returned to the harbor he discovered that his ships had all disappeared. Returning to Cuba without him. He ordered the construction of four large rafts and told his fellow soldiers that this is “where New Spain ends”. It is not known for certain where and when Narváez died; the rafts took off for Cuba but were destroyed in a hurricane. Around thirty men survived the sinking of the rafts, but Narváez was not among them. Cabeza de Vaca and the remaining Spanish survivors washed ashore near modern-day Tampa Bay. They quickly formed an expedition to reach a Spanish settlement in Mexico and regroup there, thinking it was only a few miles away, but after a series of battles with hostile natives they ended up rafting their way into southwestern Texas. Traveling west along the Colorado River, de Vaca and the survivors of the ill-fated expedition became the first Europeans to see a bison, or American buffalo. De Vaca returned to Spain nine years later and published his story. It was the bestseller of its time. In it there are references to Conquistador encounters with giants. De Vaca's astounding tales mention an encounter with giant natives during a raid while in Florida: When we attempted to cross the large lake, we came under heavy attack from many giant Indians concealed behind trees. Some of our men were wounded in this conflict for which the good armor they wore did not avail. The Indians we had so far seen are all archers. They go naked, are large of body, and appear at a distance like giants. They are of admirable proportions and of great activity and strength. The bows they use are as thick as the arm, of eleven or twelve palms in length, which they discharge at two hundred paces with so great precision that they miss nothing.

In 1539 Hernando De Soto followed in N rvaez's footsteps sailing nine ships into Tampa Bay. As they ventured inland, they encountered various tribes each with a giant that reigned as chief. For protection the Conquistadors took these chiefs hostage and called them guests. When the natives realized becoming guests meant being turned into slaves, the local tribes, led by Chief Copafi of the Apalachee, sparked an uprising. After weeks of warfare the chief was finally captured in a battle near what would become Tallahassee. Copafi was described as a man of monstrous proportions. Hernando De Soto's encounters with giants continued as he pushed further inland in 1539. Traveling with more than six hundred men and two hundred horses, he trekked through North Florida, the southern swamps of Georgia, and the landlocked crossroads of western Alabama. Before dying of fever near the western banks of the Mississippi. Rodrigo Ranjel, De Soto's private secretary, wrote a diary detailing the expedition. The new lands they explored were ruled by the giant Native American chief Tuscaloosa and upon the Conquistador's arrival, the Chief's son fiercely approached De Soto's calvary. Ranjel writes: Seeing him we paused, dumb with amazement. For, though but a youth...he towered on high. A great-limbed giant: heads of tallest men reached only to his breast.

After a three day march De Soto and fifteen soldiers entered Tuscaloosa's village, and discovered that the chief was a giant ten times mightier than his son and turned out to be the tallest and most handsomely shaped Indian they saw during all their travels.

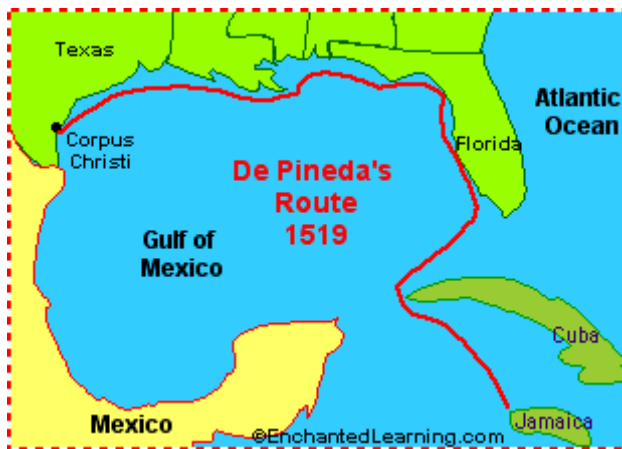

After a few days of watching colorful war dances, Tuscaloosa was persuaded to join De Soto on their quest towards Mobile. While on the trail two of De Soto's soldiers turned up missing and the returning scouts returned to warn De Soto about the many Native Americans that had gathered for rebellion. De Soto, brave and defiant, approached the town and its high walls. A welcoming committee of painted warriors, clad in robes of skins and headpieces with vibrantly colored feathers, came out to greet them. De Soto entered the town with his most trusted soldiers, Tuscaloosa, and the chief's entourage. The Spaniards stood in a piazza, surrounded by a stream of foreign colors and fluttering sounds. From here De Soto saw some eighty houses within the village. Several of them were described as large enough to hold at least one thousand people. Unknown to De Soto, more than two thousand Native American warriors stood in concealment behind the walls. After some of the chiefs from the town joined him, Tuscaloosa withdrew into the village, warning De Soto with a severe look to leave at once. Under a hail of arrows, De Soto and most of his men retreated from the village. After regrouping and devising their strategy, the Spaniards gained entry to the village, killed the chief's giant son, set fire to the buildings, and massacred the city's inhabitants.

Despite the death of his son and overall carnage left in the wake, Tuscaloosa escaped. Riding deep into unknown lands, De Soto and his men marched to capture him, but the giant chief disappeared, and the pursuing Spaniards found only abandoned cities with massive mounds.

In 1519, Alonso Álvarez de Pineda mapped the lands along the Gulf Coast, strategically marking the various rivers and bays, noticeable landmarks, and porting areas, all of which belonged to the king of Spain. After covering the coastlines from Florida to as far as Tampico, Mexico, Pineda sailed back to the mouth of the Mississippi River. Pineda was the first Spanish explorer to venture up the mighty Mississippi, and he reports finding a large settlement of native villages inhabited by giants. After the giants proved to be friendly, Pineda and crew settled among them to rest and make repairs. Pineda detailed the abundance of gold found in the river, and how the natives wore plenty of gold-engraved ornaments. He also noted that other than giants, the tribes also had a race of tiny pygmies as well. Pineda described the tribe that settled near the Mississippi river as:

A race of giants, from ten to eleven palms in height. As he sailed back to his home base in Jamaica, he made note of more giants, like the famed gargantuan's of the Karankawas encountered on the various islands of the Texas coast. When Pineda returned, he presented Francisco de Garay, the Spanish governor of Jamaica, with the first maps and sketches of the entire Gulf Coast. These maps also included Pineda's writings about the fantastic race of giants living there. These sketches and writings are known as Garay's Cédula and were archived by the famous Spanish compiler Martín Fernández de Navarrete. They can be found today by visiting the Archivo General de Indias, in Seville, Spain.

Twenty years after Pineda mapped the Gulf, Francisco Coronado marched with a huge expedition across the American Southwest searching for the legendary Seven Cities of Cibola, or what we refer to today as El Dorado. While on their quest Coronado's expedition crossed paths with several tribes of Indian giants. We have this information thanks to the writings of Pedro de Castaneda, who accompanied Coronado and wrote the complete and amazing history of the expedition. A fascinating tale concerning giants found in Castaneda's book details the journey made by Hernando de Alarcón. Low on provisions, a frantic Coronado sent Alarcón to find a river that could bring supplies more easily to the Spanish outposts along the California and Mexican coasts. After nearly destroying his ships and missing the waiting party at the rendezvous point, Alarcón haphazardly floated up the mouth of the murky Colorado River. Alarcón and his men became the first Europeans to fight the rough rapids as he brought his fleet into the heart of the Colorado River, reaching as far as the lower reaches of the Grand Canyon. While coasting up the river, Alarcón and his men came upon a settlement of an estimated two hundred giant warriors. These giants, amazed by foreign intruders on the riverbanks, were ready to attack. But Alarcón defused the situation by making peace and offering gifts, which eventually won them over. These giants were later categorized with the prevailing tribes of the area as being the Cocopa Indians. A thousand more members of this giant tribe were discovered and reported farther upstream.

Discoveries of giants have also been reported in Mexico. The Dominican friar Diego Durán is responsible for writing some of the earliest Western books on the history and culture of the Aztecs. His family moved from Spain to Mexico City when he was very young, which allowed him to grow up around the remaining natives of Mexico. While attending school he was frequently exposed to Aztec culture, then under the colonial rule of Spain. He continued to study and travel within the remaining city-states of the Aztec empire. In Texcoco he learned to speak and read the native Aztec language. By winning the Aztecs' trust, he was able to gain access to a vast amount of knowledge concerning the history of pre-

Columbian Mexico. His writings are some of the oldest known surviving texts that give us actual firsthand narratives from the ancient Aztecs. Because he spent thirty-two years among the Aztecs gathering information, learning how to read ancient native hieroglyphics, and interviewing old shamans, scholars regard Durán's work as extremely important. In The History of the Indies of New Spain, he exhaustively describes the history of Mexico from its mysterious ancient origins up to conquest and occupation by the Spaniards. In these writings the Aztecs were not shy when it came to talking about giants. But Durán didn't need to hear or read about them, he could see them. While living in Mexico he came in contact with giant Indians on several occasions. Writing about these encounters, he says emphatically:

It cannot be denied that there have been giants in this country. I can affirm this as an eyewitness, for I have met men of monstrous stature here. I believe that there are many in Mexico who will remember, as I do, a giant Indian who appeared in a procession of the feast of Corpus Christi. He appeared dressed in yellow silk and a halberd at his shoulder and a helmet on his head. And he was all of three feet taller than the others.

During his thirty-two years among the Aztecs, Durán also interviewed many old Indians knowledgeable in the ancient ways and traditions of their people. From all these sources he learned about the giants. Bernardino de Sahagun and Joseph de Acosta, two other notable historians of about the same period, also knew about a tribe of giants who once occupied central Mexico, but Durán's book offers us the best and most complete account. Durán writes that, according to the Aztecs, the giants and a bestial people of average size once had this land all to themselves. Then, in A.D. 902, six tribes of people from Teocolhuacan, (which "is found toward the north and near the region of La Florida,") began arriving in Mexico. They soon took possession of the country. A seventh tribe, the Aztecs, were brothers to these people, but they "came to live here three hundred and one years after the arrival of the others." When these six tribes had settled, Duran continues, "they recorded in their painted books the type of land and kind of people they found here. These books show two types of people, one from the west of the snow-covered mountains toward Mexico, and the other on the east. Those from the first region were Chichimecs and the people from the east were 'The Giants,' the Quiname, which means 'men of great stature.'" The few Chichimecs on the side of Mexico were brutal, savage men, and they were called Chichimecs because they were hunters. They lived among the peaks and in the harshest places of the mountain where they led a bestial existence. They had no human organization but hunted food like the beasts of the same mountain, and went stark naked without any covering on their private parts.... When the new nations came, these savage people showed no resistance or anger, but rather awe. They fled towards the hills, hiding themselves there.... The newly arrived people seeing, then, that the land was left unoccupied, chose at will the best places to live in. The other people who were found in the east are said to have been 'Giants.' These were enraged at the coming of the invaders and tried to defend their land. "These

Giants lived no less bestially than the Chichimecs, as they had abominable customs and ate raw meat from the hunt. In certain places of that region enormous bones of the Giants have been found, which I myself have seen dug up at the foot of cliffs many times. These Giants flung themselves from precipices while fleeing from the Cholultecs and were killed. The Cholultecs had been extremely cruel to the Giants, harassing them, pursuing them from hill to hill, from valley to valley, until they were destroyed." Even if we detain the reader a little, I should like to tell the manner in which the people of Cholula and Tlaxcala annihilated that evil nation. This was done by treason and deceit. They pretended to want peace with the Giants, and after having assured them of their good will they invited them to a great banquet. An ambush was then prepared. Some men slyly robbed the guests of their shields, clubs, and swords. The Cholultecs then appeared and attacked. The Giants tried to defend themselves, and, as they could not find their weapons, it is said that they tore branches from the trees with the same ease as one cuts a turnip, and in this way defended themselves valiantly. But finally all were killed."

Bernardino de Sahagun, who arrived in the Americas in 1523 and became the foremost authority in his time on the pre-conquest Aztec culture; mentions in his twelve-volume history on central Mexico that the "giants" of Quinametin built both Teotihuacan and Cholula.

In his History of the Indies, Joseph de Acosta tells a story of the giants very similar to Duran's, but he also adds this eyewitness account:

When I was in Mexico, in the year of our Lord one thousand five hundred eighty six, they found one of those giants buried in one of our farms, which we call Jesus del Monte, of whom they brought a tooth to be seen, which (without augmenting) was as big as the fist of a man; and, according to this, all the rest was proportionable, which I saw and admired at his deformed greatness... We must not holde this of the giants to be strange or a fable, for at this day, we find dead mens bones of an incredible bigness.

Bernal Díaz del Castillo marched as a swordsman in the army under Hernán Cortés during the conquest of Mexico. After surviving these expeditions he lived to be an old man and wrote what is regarded as an exceptionally accurate narrative of the famous campaign. His book would come to be known as The True History of the Conquest of New Spain. Unfortunately Díaz died before seeing his book published. Fifty years later the manuscript was found in a Madrid library and finally published in 1632. The book provides an eyewitness account of the conquest of Mexico, and it remains one of the most significant sources documenting the collapse of the Aztec Empire and the Spanish conquest of Mexico. Díaz recounts the history of the now-defeated Tlaxcatec Indians, mentioning a race of enormous giants that had once inhabited their land. During these encounters Díaz even had the chance to examine firsthand evidence of this long-forgotten race. He writes:

They said their ancestors had told them that very tall men and women with huge bones had once dwelt among them. But because they were a very bad people with wicked customs they had fought against them and killed them, and those of them who remained had died off. And to show us how big these giants had been they brought us the leg-bone of one, which was very thick and the height of an ordinary-sized man, and that was a leg-bone from the hip to the knee. I measured myself against it, and it was as tall as I am, though I am of a reasonable height. They brought other pieces of bone of the same kind, but they were all rotten and eaten away by the soil. We were all astonished by the sight of these bones and felt certain there must have been giants in that land.

An Italian scholar from Venice, Antonio Pigafetta, traveled with the famous Portuguese explorer Ferdinand Magellan and his crew on their voyage to the Indies. During the expedition Pigafetta became Magellan's assistant and kept an accurate journal that detailed the various encounters with native giants. In Magellan's Voyage: A Narrative of the First Circumnavigation, there are numerous references to giants. Pigafetta amusingly writes:

We had been two whole months in this harbor without sighting anyone when one day (without anyone expecting it) we saw on the shore a huge giant, who was naked, and who danced, leaped and sang, all the while throwing sand and dust on his head. Our Captain ordered one of the crew to walk towards him, telling this man also to dance, leap and sing as a sign of friendship. This he did, and led the giant to a place by the shore where the Captain was waiting. And when the giant saw us, he marveled and was afraid, and pointed to the sky, believing we came from heaven. He was so tall that even the largest of us came only to midway between his waist and his shoulder.

Throughout Pigafetta's narrative the giant indians repeatedly point to and ask if the Conquistadors had come from the sky. This is a very interesting side note that ties well into the ancient astronaut theory. Why in the world would they ask if they were from the skies if they had never seen anyone from the sky? Pigafetta was among the surviving 18 men who returned to Spain in 1522. The other 240 men of the expedition all died, including Magellan.

Around the same time that Magellan was having his difficulties, the famed Italian explorer Amerigo Vespucci was charting the Caribbean islands off the coast of Venezuela. Amerigo, for whom one-third of the world would later be named, wrote about the giants he encountered on the modern-day island of Curaçao.

Recounting this experience, Vespucci writes:

We landed to see if we could find fresh water, and imagining that the island was not inhabited because we saw no people.

Going along the shore we beheld very large footprints of men on the sand. And we judged if their other members were of corresponding size, that they must be very big men.

Vespucci continues the story writing about their nervous trek inside the dense island jungle interior:

We discovered a trail and set ourselves to walk on it two leagues and a half inland; we met with a village of twelve houses in which we did not find anyone except five women, two old ones and three girls so lofty in stature that we gazed at them in astonishment.

Vespucci and his men were invited to eat and drink. While doing so they formed a plan to kidnap the three exotic girls. But their plans dissolved quickly when the giant men of the village returned. In a state of anxiety, Vespucci recalls: While we were thus plotting, thirty-six men arrived, who entered the house where we were drinking, and they were of such lofty stature that each of them was taller when upon his knees than I was when standing erect. Men that were so well built, it was a famous sight to see them. They were of the stature of giants in their great size and in the proportion of their bodies, which corresponded with their height. When the men entered, some of our fellows were so frightened that at the moment they thought they were done for. The warriors had bows and arrows and tremendous oar blades finished off like swords. When they saw our small stature, they began to converse with us to learn who we were and whence we came. We gave them soft words for the sake of amity and replied to them in sign language that we were men of peace and that we were out to see the world. In fact, we judged it wise to part from them without controversy, and so we went by the same trail by which we had come. They stuck with us all the way to the sea and until we embarked. Vespucci and company made it safely back to their boats and fired off a few shots from their cannons. The frightened giants scattered back into their villages, and Vespucci sailed away. He promptly named Curaçao the Isle of Giants.