Ephesians 5:11, 13-16: "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. But all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, Redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

The 1828 Noah Webster Dictionary defines:

Reprove: To blame, to convince of a fault, or to make it manifest, to excite a sense of guilt.

Circumspectly: Cautiously; with watchfulness every way; with attention to guard against surprise or danger.

Matthew 24:24: "...if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."

II Corinthians 2:11: "Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices."

II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

Prometheus the Movie Exposed-- Prometheus's Fire, Alien Gods and Pandora's Box of tricks

In the recent movie Prometheus directed and produced by the 'father of film' Ridley Scott we find many connections to literature and common themes that talk of 'creator gods' descending to Earth in the ancient world.

See Scott Johnson's Teaching:

The "Ancient Astronaut" Lie: The Shocking Origin of the "Intelligent Design" Theory &

The Intelligent Design LIE

As a prequel to the infamous Alien movies, the story commences in the distant past, when a spacecraft with an advanced humanoid alien species (Genetic Engineers) arrive on Earth.

The alien engineer consumes a 'dark liquid', causing his body to disintegrate and fall into a nearby waterfall, hinting at the 'seeding of new life on Earth' literally. The essence of life in this way is 'visually' conveyed quite graphically as infectious 'codes' (the building blocks of life) passing through the blood and 'DNA' of all life on Earth. Later in the movie we witness the impact of the meddling scientists that go to the place of origin and enter an alien chamber on a distant moon (planet).

Ancient stories from all over the world talk of the 'gods', giants and titans both fighting and ruling over humanity, it's actually quite common once you delve a little deeper into the subject. All over the world many ancient civilizations believed they were in communication with gods that came from the skies. There are ancient records, art and myths that are also connected to these legends of 'sky people' coming down to Earth.

Ancient art and texts have always been a major source for depicting the 'sky gods'

The legend of Prometheus is one that tells of this Titan deciding that he would disobey the gods and make humans 'gods' themselves. According to Greek mythology Prometheus belonged to the old order of Gods (the Titans) and was from the bloodline of 'Iapetus (also a moon of Saturn) and Uranus; his legend tells of stealing fire from Zeus and giving it to humanity. The Fire Prometheus stole was said to be the very essence of life and this 'light', that it was literally 'life itself'. In Greek mythology Prometheus is a 'creator god' & his actions were considered both 'rebellious' and symbolic of the spirit of the fallen one! Lucifer is also noted as the 'Bringer of Light'.

The statue of Prometheus that stands outside the General Electric Building and overlooking the ice ring at the Rockefeller Center in New York, (crafted by the heavily connected Paul Howard Manship), epitomizes the 'elite' as 'gods' on Earth today! The Rockefellers, like the Rothschilds are families that 'see themselves' as 'bloodline royalty' connected with the 'counterfeit gods' of the movie Prometheus. The General Electric building (above) also celebrates Saturn 'father of the Titans' named Urizen by William Blake's in his image of the same design called The Ancient of Days (above middle).

For More About Saturn AKA Satan see Scott Johnson's Teaching: The HEXagram, the Mark of the Beast & the Hebrew Roots Connection

Atlas was another Titan and the brother of Prometheus (above right) also gets a look in.

The Maya of Central America say that an 'advanced knowledge' was handed down to them by the creatures of the plumed serpent, their saviour god Quetzalcoatl. In Egypt the same was said of the their god Osiris.

In Sumeria, Egypt and Central America the gods became known as 'civilisers' of the world and were worshipped for their 'superhuman' abilities. These gods were also said to have lived openly amongst the ancients before a 'global' catastrophic flood, recorded in numerous civilizations, these gods then went underground into the catacombs that were said to stretch great distances across the Earth.

Right) The Nefilim (the giants) were said to be the offspring of the Gods

Through much art and oral tradition these gods are depicted as a serpent race, or the Itzamma (lizard) gods, that are said to preside over the 'underworld'. In Mayan art and sculpture the same gods are often shown as large serpents rearing up to spew forth their descendants who became the wicked kings that would rule the Earth surface population. The Sumerian clay tablets also show detailed descriptions of how (what they call the Anunnaki gods) interbreed with human women to create a hybrid race, a fusion of human genes. Their offspring were known as the Nefilim, Rephiam, Emim and Anakim, a giant race, recorded in cave art all over the world.

In ancient Inca tradition it is said that a mysterious race of beings called the Viracochas (below left) were said to have created the Nazca lines in Peru and they were also depicted as Caucasian (mainly bearded) 'supergods'.

The word Viracochas" is interpreted as the 'White Masters from the skies' who promised to return. When they would return is debatable but movies like Prometheus hint at a time in the future? It was said that the Viracochas gave us astronomy, building skills, the celestial calendar and much besides to the Incas. They were said to have built the ancient ruins of Tiahuanacu (above right) in one day with a magic trumpet! I have been to Tiahuanacu and it certainly has some amazing feats of stone masonry and architectural structures.

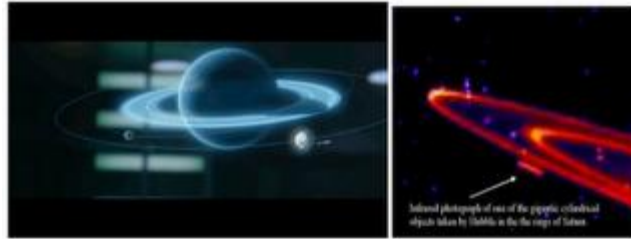

In many accounts the Viracochas were said to use a heavenly fire (the same fire that Prometheus stole maybe?) that could lift huge blocks of stone. Many mysterious feats were associated with these hero figures (gods) that were, according to some legends, said to have arrived via the planet Mars..

All the attributes given to a mysterious Caucasian blue eyed, bearded gods of the prehistoric world were attributed to the many false saviour gods that would emerge much later in places like Meso- America (Quetzacoatl), Phoenicia (Baal), Babylon (Tammuz) and Rome (Mithra) all of these 'Gods' were considered 'masters of time'.

The Alien Genetic Engineers in Ridley Scott's movie are 'giants' (see below) and of course 'time travelers' and Scott's work would have been loosely inspired by ancient knowledge of the gods found all over the world.

The film unfolds with the space ship Prometheus (in 2093) arriving in the orbit around the moon LV-223, after passing a planet that looks like Saturn, hence the connection to Saturn's moon 'Prometheus' and the Moon that they eventually land on called LV-223. The reasoning behind the mission is as the head scientist Shaw states, the matching star maps found on various artifacts are an 'invitation'.

Looks like its was actually Saturn they went to?

With the increase in 'trans-humanism' and cyborg technology, it was no shock that Scott chose to incorporate an 'android' within the plot as well.

In the movie his name is 'David' (Michael Fassbender) who stays awake at the pilot control to monitor their voyage. Later in the movie the android carries out his own sinister agenda, which hints at the dangers of trans-humanism.

In the movie, David's command of ancient languages and his ability to read hieroglyphs allows him to unlock the star maps coded by the race of alien Engineers.

On a more serious note, the connections to a technology obsessed 'trans human agenda' today could leave us all 'plugged' into a robotic reality (This is Satan's ultimate Plan). Holograms are being used more than ever, with Elvis due to make an appearance on stage in 2012.

Peter Weyland (Guy Pearce), the elderly founder and CEO of the Weyland Corporation, funds the creation of the scientific deep space research that becomes the Prometheus mission. The Weyland corporation (in the movie) is everything that the 'global elite' are today. Peter Weyland in his TED speech says, "We can create cybernetic individuals, we are the gods now..."

He also says, "from the Titan Prometheus (we received) our first true piece of technology – fire"

The illuminati bloodlines are the kings of biotech, nano-technology and nuclear fusion and the movie hints at this through the very 'elite' Weyland Corporation. The elite are doing all of this now through genetic engineering of crops, DNA databases, test tube species, brave new worlds of mutant robotic life forms... You name it they're doing it...

Of course in Ridley Scott's films the Alien species is a hybrid 'predator' that is born of the combination of the alien genetic engineers (the Gods - in the movie Prometheus) and an albino reptilian species called the Hammerpedes (below left) that resemble the face huggers in Scott's earlier Alien movies.

The one eyed symbolism comes up again and not least connects to the one eyed South Pole of Saturn

The interesting connections visually for me are that there seems to be a common theme of reptilian like aliens 'converging' with a humanoid alien-god species.

T H Huxley's X club of the 1880's, which was an elite group of nine men that believed that humanity had been 'seeded on Earth' by advanced beings from space, is another connection. The Huxley's, Darwin's and the Wedgwood families all interbred (like Royalty) to advance their ideas of a super human race and its connections to the stars.

And Sir Fred Hoyle the author of Life from Space said: "The likelihood of the formation of life from inanimate mater is one to a number with 40,000 zeros after it.... It is big enough to bury Darwin and the whole theory of evolution. There was no primeval soup, neither on this planet nor on any other, and if the beginnings of life were not random, they must therefore have been the product of purposeful intelligence."

Also, A meteorite found in Antarctica in 1995 called CR2 Grave Nunataks 59229, according to Professor Sandra Pizzarello at the National Academy of Sciences, shows that the building blocks of life likely came from space.

Even Francis Crick understood that the human genome was not 'natural' and must have been engineered.

Paul Davies writing in the New Scientist Magazine also suggested our DNA could be the answer to so-called extraterrestrial life forms. The article also went on to explain how one segment of DNA contained more than a million base pairs – He said, “enough for a decent-sized novel or the history of a rise and fall of an alien civilisation.”

It seems that alongside the myths and legends of the superhuman Caucasian gods there was another series of deities, which were worshipped and recorded as the 'Shining Ones' or the 'Watchers' mentioned in texts like the Book of Enoch and the Dead Sea Scrolls.

See Scott Johnson’s Teaching:

Cloning, DNA Manipulation & Corrupting The Seed & the Book of Enoch

The same gods were also known as the Anunnaki of Sumerian history and possibly there is a connection to the Nagar in Ancient India. According to the Aztecs a giant race was said to have lived on Earth at the time of the First Sun (Age), which was destroyed by water, leaving a 'new Earth' for the 'gods' to build their new civilization. Science fiction novels and comics throughout over the past 150 years of course has been full of themes that connect 'alien life' with that of the legends of the flood.

The story of Deucalion and Pyrrha is the Greek counterfeit version of Noah and the great flood. Warned by his father Prometheus, Deucalion built an ark (a ship) to survive the coming flood that Zeus (the creator) was sending to punish mankind?

One of the other 'punishments' was to send the Goddess 'Pandora' for Prometheus's presumption in stealing his fire. Her name meant Pan (all) and dora (gifts) and Pandora's box in this case the movie Prometheus was an alien DNA that is intent on ending all life.

When the ampoule-like artifacts 'leak' inside the alien chamber, the android David secretly returns an ampoule to the ship. From this cylinder he commences the mutation that eventually unleashes 'Pandora's box', which of course genetically helps to 'spawn' the 'Alien Predator' species.

The creature that starts in the womb of the human woman (Dr Shaw) and eventually enters the body of the 'Alien Engineer,' ultimately becomes the 'reptilian looking' creature from the "Alien" movies.

GATTACA becomes reality as scientists screen, abort human babies based on 3,500 'genetic faults'

Ethan A. Huff-Infowars.com-June 11, 2012

The popular 1997 science fiction film Gattaca portrays a futuristic world in which human beings genetically engineered (GE) with certain desirable and superior genetic traits are given preference to natural-born human beings who are considered inferior. And in just 15 years since the release of the film, this scenario has become a reality, as modern science has come up with a new way to test unborn babies for roughly 3,500 so-called genetic “defects.”

The U.K.’s Telegraph reports that a team of researchers from the University of Washington (UW) in Seattle has contrived a method of examining the genetic code of unborn babies via blood samples taken from their mothers, and saliva samples taken from their fathers. The tiny amounts of free-floating DNA present in both samples allow researchers to essentially map the entire genetic code of unborn babies and determine which genetic traits they will have upon birth.

Some babies are born naturally with “de novo” mutations, which are said to be linked to genetic defects such as Down syndrome and cystic fibrosis.

In 39 out of 44 tested cases, the UW researchers were able to accurately pinpoint prior to birth de novo mutations that would occur in babies after birth. And as the technology becomes widely available to parents in the near future, the ghastly scenario depicted in the movie Gattaca will evolve into an ever-present reality where the only unborn babies permitted to live and thrive will be those with “superior” genetic makeups.

“This work opens up the possibility that we will be able to scan the whole genome of the fetus for more than 3,000 single-gene disorders through a single, non-invasive test,” said Dr. Jay Shendure, lead scientist for the research published in the journal . His entire team, however, corporately added that “incorporating this level of information into prenatal decision-making raises many ethical questions that must be considered carefully within the scientific community and on a societal level.”

Genetic screening will lead to more abortions, more eugenics, and a culture of genetic class suppression

When science starts openly tampering with human life based on subjective perceptions of which genetic traits are desirable and which are not desirable, there is no stopping the pandora’s box of population control techniques that will surely ensue. Parents seeking the “perfect” child, for instance, will be more likely to simply abort a child with genetic “errors” and keep trying until they get the one they want.

As government-run healthcare emerges into full reality, state-controlled doctors may begin telling parents that they are not allowed to have an imperfect child because treating that child’s inevitable genetic conditions will cost the state too much money. Forced abortions, in other words, could become the norm if genetic testing techniques like the ones developed at UW become widespread.

And ultimately, the breeding of genetically “superior” children will more than likely lead to a genetically superior class of humans that looks down on those with inferior genetic traits. This is exactly what occurred in the movie Gattaca, as “inferior” humans with natural imperfections were denied jobs and treated like second-class citizens.

Instead, researchers should be looking for ways to eliminate the thousands of untested chemicals that are added to the food supply (http://www.naturalnews.com/035680_food_packaging_chemicals_PFOA.html), remove toxic fluoride chemicals from water supplies (<http://www.fluoridealert.org/downs-syndrome.htm>), and end the administration of gene-tampering vaccines to young children (http://www.naturalnews.com/033062_Rupert_Murdoch_Andrew_Wakefield.html).

These human interventions have been shown to be directly responsible for causing genetic defects in humans, and are just a few of the many causes of de novo mutations. If unborn babies were not exposed to chemicals like bisphenol A, herbicides like glyphosate (Roundup), genetically-modified (GM) organisms, and chemical vaccine adjuvants like Thimerosal (mercury) and aluminum, many of them would not even develop genetic defects in the first place.

Recent research has proven that genetic damage caused by chemical exposure can pass from generation to generation through a process known as epigenetics, even when subsequent generations are not directly exposed to those chemicals (<http://www.naturalnews.com>). This means that man-made toxins such as those sprayed on conventional food crops, added to processed foods, laced in the water supply, and applied to furniture and other consumer products are a blatant scourge on the human genome.

But science would rather ignore the obvious, and instead design technologies that will allow the system to filter out genetic “undesirables” after they have been conceived. What Hitler and other deranged tyrants of the past tried to accomplish violently is now becoming possible genetically with “scientific advancement” as its cover.

World's first Genetically Modified babies born

Scientists have confirmed that the first genetically altered humans have been born and are healthy. Up to 30 such children have been born - 15 of them as a result of one experimental programme at a US laboratory.

But the technique has been criticised as unethical by some scientists and would be illegal in many countries, including the United Kingdom.

Genetic fingerprint tests on two one-year-old children confirm that they contain a small quantity of additional genes not inherited from either parent.

The additional genes were taken from a healthy donor and used to overcome the infertility problems of the mother.

The additional genes that the children carry have altered their germline, or their collection of genes that they will pass on to their offspring.

Altering the germline is something that the vast majority of scientists deem unethical given the limitations of our knowledge.

It is illegal to do so in many countries and the US Government will not provide funds for any experiment that intentionally or unintentionally alters inherited genes.

British experts have severely criticised the development.

Infertility pioneer Lord Winston of the Hammersmith Hospital in London told BBC News Online that he had great reservations about it.

"Regarding the treatment of the infertile, there is no evidence that this technique is worth doing," he said. "I am very surprised that it was even carried out at this stage. It would certainly not be allowed in Britain.

"There is no evidence that this is a possible valuable treatment for infertility," he added.

Lord Winston said that, although the number of additional genes involved was tiny, it was in principle the wrong thing to do.

The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA), the body that monitors and regulates UK reproductive medical activities, told BBC News Online that it was aware of the technique but had decided not to allow it in the UK because of its uncertainties and the possible alteration of the human germline.

US researchers have also criticised the production of genetically altered children.

Eric Juengst, of Case Western Reserve University, said: "It should trouble those committed to transparent public conversation about the prospect of using 'reprogenetic' technologies to shape future children."

Bionic Brains and Beyond--High-tech implants will soon be commonplace enhancements under our skin and inside our skulls

By DANIEL H. WILSON

The National Spelling Bee of 2023 started out like any other, but controversy enveloped the contest when Suzy Hamilton, an 8-year-old from Tulsa, emerged as the new champion.

Contestants had been getting younger for years; that was nothing new. But midway through the event it was discovered that Suzy was—in the words of one commentator—"amped." At the age of 4, suffering from seizures and severe attention and behavioral problems, Suzy had received an experimental new treatment: a neural implant that prevented her seizures and helped her to focus. As it turned out, the device also appeared to make her a prodigy at memorization, as her parents and teachers soon discovered.

"Amped" author Daniel Wilson discusses the emergence, in the not-so-distant future, of a new class of people whose microchip-enhanced mental abilities may raise questions about what it means to be human. He speaks with WSJ's Gary Rosen.

Was this youngest-ever winner fully human or was she part machine? Was it fair for her to be in a competition with peers made of mere flesh and blood? The lawsuits will soon hit the courts. A new battle over civil rights—over the very definition of the word "human"—had begun.

Sounds far-fetched? It isn't. Over the next decade, new implantable technologies will fundamentally alter the social landscape. We are fast approaching a milestone in the eons-long relationship between human beings and their technology. Families once gathered around the radio like it was a warm fireplace. Then boom boxes leapt onto our shoulders. The Sony Walkman climbed into our pockets and sank its black foam tentacles into our ears. The newest tools are creeping still closer: They will soon come inside and make themselves at home under our skin—some already have.

Will You Barcode Your Children?

Barcodes and microchips could be found on nearly everything these days, but could humans be next? American science fiction author Elizabeth Moon raised a few eyebrows last week when she revived the debate about whether it could be beneficial to place barcodes on babies at birth during an interview on a BBC radio program. 'I would insist on every individual having a unique ID permanently attached — a barcode if you will — an implanted chip to provide an easy, fast inexpensive way to identify individuals,' she said on a weekly show called The Forum, according to the New York Daily News. While the technology is already in place, civil liberties advocates have decried past efforts to make 'barcoding' a reality, claiming that it would create an Orwellian society devoid of privacy where 'Big Brother' is always watching.

Even without the barcodes, governments have an ever-expanding array of tools at their disposal to track people. Since 2006, new U.S. passports include radio frequency identification tags (RFID) that store all the information in the passport (Remedy: ID Stronghold Passport Wallet), as well as a digital picture of the owner.

In 2002, an implantable ID chip called VeriChip was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. When scanned, the chip could pull up a 16-digit number containing information about the user.

Tracked: Civil liberties advocates have decried past efforts to make 'barcoding' a reality, claiming that it would create a dystopian society

The program was scrapped in 2010 amid concerns about privacy and safety, but other companies have since come forward, offering similar products.

The biotech company MicroCHIPS has developed an implantable chip without injection, while the technology company BIOPTid has patented a non-invasive method of identification called the 'human barcode.'

Advocates of futuristic identification methods say the barcode could help parents or caregivers keep track of children and the elderly.

Chips, they claim, could be used to easily access medical records, and would make going through security at airports and train stations more convenient to the travellers, who are now forced to stand on lines and go through scanners.

Texas Schools to Begin Tracking Students With IDs Embedded with RFID Chips

By Madison Ruppert theintelhub.com May 26, 2012

In an attempt to get more money from the state, a middle school and high school in Texas are implementing a program in which student IDs will be outfitted with radio-frequency identification (RFID) chips in order to track their movements around school.

If you're unfamiliar with this technology, a great primer on the subject has been written by Brent Daggett for End the Lie and I highly recommend you take a few minutes to explore some of the other applications of RFID, many of which are nothing short of disturbing.

As is so often done when it comes to surveillance technology, this is being sold to us as something for our own good and the good of our children. This is identical to how the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is pushing their ludicrously unconstitutional license plate surveillance program.

The Northside Independent School District (NISD) of San Antonio, Texas has already approved the tracking devices and according to local news outlet KVUE, an ABC affiliate, two schools in the district will have the program in place next year.

They characterize the RFID-equipped student IDs as somewhat "like a GPS for teachers and administrators" which will help them pinpoint the location of students around campus.

"Every parent wants us to know where their child is at school," claimed NISD spokesman Pascual Gonzalez.

I find this claim nothing short of laughable. Never before has this even been an issue, let alone one which "every parent" would be concerned about.

Growing up my parents knew I was at school; they couldn't care less if I was in the bathroom, the library, a classroom or any other location.

To me, Gonzalez's claim is so absurd that it is almost hard to believe that anyone would even attempt to use such a nonsensical argument.

What parent cares what particular room their child is in? One legitimate concern might be if your child is ditching school, but an RFID isn't required for that, there's this crazy newfangled thing called "attendance" or "roll" which determines if students are present in class.

If I had a child in a public school, I would be much more concerned about him or her being targeted by police, attacked and/or criminalized. The last of my concerns would be if my child was in the restroom at 11:18 AM or where in the cafeteria they were during lunch time.

Of course, this has nothing to do with parents or anything of the sort. "It's going to give us the opportunity to track our students in the building," said Wendy Reyes, the principal at Jones Middle School, where 1,200 students are going to be tagged and monitored.

"It will help us have a more accurate account of our attendance," she added.

This is where it becomes clear what the real purpose is: money.

According to KVUE, NISD loses $175,000 every day in state funding due to children who either are absent or tardy to class.

Apparently, being able to monitor students who weren't able to make it to first period could pay off greatly, potentially over $250,000 in state funding, according to district officials.

Furthermore, they claim that they could obtain $1.2 million from Medicaid since they will also be monitoring the movements of the special-needs students.

While the district officials claim the chips implanted in student IDs will pay for themselves, the program will involve a startup cost of over $500,000. hilariously, KVUE even refers to the program as Big Brother in no uncertain terms whatsoever.

"But 'Big Brother' has his limitations, because the tag can only track students within the walls of the buildings on campus, or on special-needs buses," writes Joe Conger.

One would assume that they would be trying to distance this technology from the idea of Big Brother as much as possible but oddly enough, that is far from the case.

It will be interesting to see if this is effective and if it will be implemented in more school districts around the nation, further teaching our children that they not only have to kowtow to police but also that they have to accept having their movements closely monitored by the so-called authorities.

Police Stop, Handcuff Every Adult at Intersection in Search for Bank Robber

Police in Aurora, Colo., searching for suspected bank robbers stopped every car at an intersection, handcuffed all the adults and searched the cars, one of which they believed was carrying the suspect.

Police said they had received what they called a "reliable" tip that the culprit in an armed robbery at a Wells Fargo bank committed earlier was stopped at the red light.
